Forecast for Tuesday 08 Sep 2020

Weather: A mainly dry start to the day on Tuesday with a few bright spells especially in the east of the Lake District. Cloud will soon thicken and there will be outbreaks of drizzle and patchy light rain particularly around western Fells. In the east it may well stay dry with the odd cloud break until late afternoon when light rain will begin to affect most of the district. A wet and cloudy evening is likely with fog in many places. Quite a breezy day especially on the fell tops.

Chance of cloud free mountain/hill tops above 800m: In the morning 80% chance with just some patches of cloud round the western fells at 600m and above. By mid-afternoon 30% with broken cloud around 600m, perhaps more clear fell tops in the east around Ullswater and Ambleside.

Visibility: Generally good in the morning, becoming moderate in light rain at times in the afternoon. It's likely to be quite poor in the west by mid-afternoon and perhaps less than a kilometre in the evening in the west.
